The opening ceremony of the 2018 Paris Peace Forum

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The program of the Paris Peace Forum echoes the overall objective of the event: presenting, vetting and advancing solutions that address global governance challenges by putting everybody around the table – states, multilateral organizations, NGOs, companies, religious groups, etc.

That is why we developed a program based on the projects selected on September 3, and inserted these debates in the Space for Solutions, the beating heart of the Forum. It was the place...

- Where the Forum's 121 project teams, coming from 42 countries and 10 international organizations, presented their initiatives at their stands.
- Where we organized 30 Brainstorm or Fishbowl conversations designed for project leaders to engage with the audience on ways to raise their impact, roll out or scale up their initiatives.
- Where participants initiated numerous networking activities: More than 200 Braindate sessions to grasp development opportunities and 26 Meet-up sessions to elaborate on growth plans for initiatives presented at the Paris Peace Forum.
- Where eight project leaders advocated for their initiative in front of Heads of State and Government during a Hearing that took place on 11 November.

The focus on solutions inspired all debates, from the inauguration with numerous Heads of State and Government to the closing ceremony of the event.

- To fill this original approach to global challenges with life, more than 65 Heads of State and Government and 10 leaders of International organizations gathered on 11 November. Antonio GUTERRES, Secretary-General of the United Nations, inaugurated the Forum emphasizing the contribution of such an innovative conference in enhancing multilateralism.
- Solutions were also front and center during conversations in the 800-seat Agora or in the 300-seat Auditorium. The 20 high-level sessions, involving national or international public decision-makers as well as executives of leading global companies and representatives of civil society associations, debated specific projects to shed more light on solutions at hand than on problems at stakes. In one of the sessions, the new Chair of The Elders, Mary ROBINSON, first President of Ireland to be a woman and former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, came up with recommendations for the Director-General of the French Development Agency on their gender budgeting policies in Africa.

The active participation of global leaders reinforced the emphasis on bold initiatives.

- 40 diplomatic bilateral meetings on the sidelines of the Forum left some time for new initiatives to be announced, taking advantage of a global press coverage by more than 450 accredited journalists. Among those important initiatives, the Paris call for Trust and Security in Cyberspace was introduced by several of his early signatories, including Brad SMITH, President of Microsoft, and Jean-Yves LE DRIAN, French Minister of Foreign Affairs.
- The Paris Peace Forum hosted two disruptive political conversations: The Dialogue of Continents on Global Governance and the Dialogue of International Organizations on Global Governance committed high-level representatives from regional powers and leading institutions of the multilateral system to think through today's challenges of international cooperation in a live broadcast.
- Heads of State, Government and International Organizations highlighted the importance of fixing multilateral systems with hybrid solutions that combine public and private resources. In this very spirit, several heads of State, including Justin TRUDEAU, Prime Minister of Canada, or Beji Caid ESSEBSI, President of Tunisia, launched the Commission "Information and Democracy" along with distinguished academic and diplomatic or corporate leaders.
- The aspiration to capture actionable ideas on the future of international cooperation was fleshed out with concrete pieces of advice from world-class change makers. Masterclass series on crafting sustainable peace created a cozy corner to engage with Heads of State or Government as well as civic leaders like the 2015 Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Ouided BOUCHAMOU or the United Nations Peace Messenger, Yo-Yo MA.
- Existing initiatives gained momentum at the Paris Peace Forum to further advocate their cause. Macky SALL, President of Senegal, and Carlos ALVARADO, President of Costa Rica, lent their support to the Global Pact for the Environment along with its promoter Laurent FABIUS, former Chair of the COP21.

We look forward to the 2019 edition of the Forum to pull together all actors of global governance focused on solutions to lapses and threats to the multilateral system.

Roberta ANNAN brought her enthusiastic support to the event as well as a special touch: Prior to the closing remarks, she presented a fashion show featuring the clothes of her ethical fashion production in Africa.

With more than 40 diplomatic bilateral meetings on 11 November 2018, the Paris Peace Forum emerged as a leading platform to craft sustainable peace.

This year's Forum hosted a Peace Library: On a 5-meter high tree, leaders from all over the planet deposited a book capturing the way they envision peace. We are looking forward to the 2019 edition of the Forum which will include cultural aspects of global governance.
